Kenmare Resources

CASE STUDY

About

Kenmare Resources is an Irish incorporated mining company with its head office located in Dublin. The company is a member of the FTSE All-Share Index and has a premium listing on the London Stock Exchange and a secondary listing on the Irish Stock Exchange.

The principal activity of the company is the operation of the Moma Titanium Minerals Mine, which is located on the north east coast of Mozambique. The Moma Mine contains deposits of heavy minerals which include the titanium minerals ilmenite and rutile, as well as the zirconium silicate mineral, zircon.

Q&A

We spoke to Jose Sinanhal, System Administrator at Kenmare Resources, about their need for a workforce management solution to improve their compliance, reduce their risk and increase their productivity.

What were you using to previously manage your workforce in these areas?

We were previously using another EHS solution which had a number of limitations and gaps in functionality such as action management and root case analysis.

What was sought in a new system?

We sought a new user-friendly system were all data and reporting would be maintained, managed and readily available when required.

What have been some notable changes since implementing the system?

Since implementing INX, the most notable positive changes have included:
· Ease of and range of reporting
· Redefining the 'assign user' security access,
· Aligning the monthly stats with Kenmare Report systems
· Focus on relevant and important incidents and events with the ability to better manage and report.

How would you describe the training and implementation services provided to you during the project?

The training and implementation stages were excellent, well put together and very informative.

How would you describe the supporting services provided to you after the initial implementation project?

The supporting services are good and the INX team is always there to help us whenever we have any questions.
